Subject nib foundation welcomes new Executive Officer nib foundation has welcomed a new Executive Officer, with Amy Tribe appointed to manage the Hunter-based charitable organisation.

Mrs Tribe brings a wealth of funding program experience to nib foundation with 10 years experience in government and community organisations delivering a variety of initiatives.

Mrs Tribe said she is passionate about contributing to improved health outcomes for the community through the development of strong partnerships and the delivery of projects focused on areas of identified need.

“I have a keen interest in health and well-being sector, and strongly support nib foundation’s goals, in particular the key focal areas of carers and young people,” she said.

“I’m really looking forward to working with our current and future partners to make a difference to the health and wellbeing of Australians both in the Hunter and around the country.”

Mrs Tribe has a degree in biomedical science and recently completed a Graduate Certificate in Applied Management (Health) at Newcastle University.

Established in 2008 thanks to a $25 million donation from nib, the foundation supports programs aimed at improving the health of all Australians. To date, the more than $5.4 million in funding has been announced for a range of community and national programs.
