Adding your dependants

Having your spouse and dependant children on your cover can be important for your own peace of mind.

Adding your dependants

In order to add your spouse and/or your dependants to your cover, you will first need to speak with your employer regarding your eligibility to have them added to your plan.

It's important to understand that cover is offered to dependants by your employer, and at their discretion. nib is not permitted to add dependants to your policy without authorization from your employer.

Please note that this same process applies for adding on new born babies, or if you are newly married and wanting to add your spouse.

If your family is eligible

If your employer confirms you are eligible to add your dependants to your cover, your employer will work through the process to notify nib.

nib will require you to download and complete a Confirmation Authority Form with the details of each of the family members to be covered. This will ensure that we have you and your family members covered by the product that meets your requirements from an immigration and/or taxation perspective.

If your family is not eligible

If your employer advises you are not eligible for cover under the UnitedHealthcare Global plan provided by nib in Australia, please contact us about arranging a quote to provide separate cover for your family.

Important:

Your family may require cover for immigration or taxation purposes. If you are not sure how this applies to your circumstances please contact nib to discuss.

Please read this in conjunction with your product fact sheet and other relevant information that you would have received in your nib welcome email.
